THE ZOO

WHEEEE!" cried Koko and Kola as they jumped off the high chair. "We've been waiting for you a long time!"

"You were?" said Raymond. "I'm sorry I'm late, but I've been looking at the funny house we live in now. It hasn't any upstairs and it hasn't any downstairs. It's all on one floor!"

"That isn't funny," said Koko. "This is an apartment house. There is an upstairs and a downstairs, but different people live there."

"Yes," said Kola. "We live in the city now. Let's take the elevator downstairs and see what it's like outside."

When Raymond pressed the button, the elevator zoomed right down to the street! Before you could blink your eyes, there were Koko, Kola and Raymond out on the sidewalk, the sidewalk of a big city.

Wait a minute! What was that? Right in front of them, on the curb, sat a bunch of fuzzy gray fur with a big bushy tail. They watched it take the shell off a nut and then pop the nut into its mouth. A few quick hops and it had disappeared behind a fence.

"I'm going to follow the squirrel," said Raymond. "We'll find out what's on the other side of that fence."

"We're going with you," said Koko and Kola as they jumped over the fence after Raymond.

Oh, the world on the other side of the fence wasn't a bit like the big city! There was green grass, and big trees.

"Rooooaar!" called a lion.

"Quack, quack!" said a duck.

There were many other noises too. And the squirrel wasn't making any of them. Raymond turned around and there, facing him, was a very funny horse, except that it also looked something like a stick of peppermint candy. It was a zebra. What is more, it was walking straight towards Raymond.

Raymond forgot about the squirrel. He forgot about Koko and Kola. He started to walk too, straight away from the zebra! When he saw the zebra right behind him, Raymond started to run. And you can be sure that Koko and Kola were running right with him. They ran very fast, but the zebra ran just as fast. As a matter of fact, the zebra had almost caught up with them when Raymond spied a bench. Up he jumped on it and Koko and Kola jumped right beside him. The zebra, though, was running so fast that it ran right past the bench without even seeing Raymond or Koko or Kola.

Now that they were safe on the bench, Raymond and his two little friends had time to look around. This was no ordinary place they were in. There was a little pond nearby with little white ducks swimming in it. On the other side was a little lake with a seal diving in and out of the water. And there, walking calmly down the path, was a real tiger.

Why, this must be the zoo! The zoo in the middle of the night, when all the animals are out of their cages. Raymond was so busy looking at all the animals all around him that he got tired and looked up in the air for a rest. But it was no rest. There, over his head, was a monkey swinging from the branch of a tree by his tail. And he kept going along swinging from the branch of one tree to the branch of another. Raymond went right along after him. He forgot about Koko. He forgot about Kola. He just jumped off the bench and walked along with his head up in the air watching the monkey. He didn't even look where he was going.

And that was his big mistake, for suddenly, he could go no further. Something was directly in front of him, something very big, something that towered high over his head. It was an elephant with a crinkly skin, big flat flapping ears, and a huge trunk that could pick Raymond right up. That's just what happened too! The elephant scooped Raymond up in its trunk, swished the trunk around, and Raymond found himself sitting right on the elephant's back! Just like a little boy from India, Raymond sat there while the elephant marched around the zoo. But the elephant was very high and Raymond had to lean over its side to see all the animals around him. There were big white bears, polar bears. And they didn't look so big next to the elephant. Then they passed penguins with their white shirts and black tails and they really looked tiny next to the elephant.

Raymond should have been having a wonderful time, riding through the zoo on his own private elephant, but something was wrong. He didn't feel exactly happy. Then he realized why: Koko and Kola weren't there. He had almost forgotten about them. Raymond leaned over and whispered in the elephant's ear, "You must let me down. I want to look for Koko and Kola. I left them on a bench and I want to find them."

The elephant swished its trunk back, picked up Raymond and set him down on the ground. Almost before his feet touched the grass, Raymond started running toward the bench where he had left his friends. "Oh, I hope they are waiting for me!" he said, while he ran. "I want to tell them that I rode on the back of an elephant."

Raymond couldn't tell his story though. For when he got to the bench, there was no Koko and no Kola. The bench was empty. The only thing that Raymond did see was a crocodile crawling along on its little legs, with its big mouth open so wide that Raymond could see all of its pointy teeth. It didn't take Raymond long to turn on his heels and run. He didn't want to ask anything with a mouth so big whether it had seen Koko or Kola!

Luckily, Raymond had to stop running to catch his breath or he never would have found Koko and Kola. For when he did stop, he looked alongside of him and there was an animal as high as an apartment house. It was all covered with little spots, just as if it had the measles, and most of it was a long neck and very long legs. The giraffe's head was so high up in the air because its neck was so long that it didn't even know that Koko and Kola were huddled underneath it, standing between its long, long legs. But Raymond saw them there.

Then the giraffe saw Raymond and bent its long neck down low so that its mouth could nibble at Raymond. Now Raymond didn't like to be nibbled at, and Koko and Kola were too frightened to run from under the giraffe. It was indeed a problem.

All the animals in the zoo gathered around to see just what Raymond was going to do. Now he was really frightened and what he wanted to do was to run, run far away from the spotted animal with the long legs and the long, long neck. If he did that, though, his friends, Koko and Kola would be left to the mercy of the horrible animal. What should Raymond do?

He did just what you would do. He gritted his teeth, reached out his arm to Koko and Kola and said, "Here, take my hand, I'll help you." And Raymond put his hand right under the giraffe and pulled his two friends away.

Then with his head very high, Raymond marched proudly out of the zoo while Koko and Kola ran alongside, thanking him for saving their lives; and all the animals in the zoo applauded and shouted: "Hurrah! Raymond is a brave boy!"
